

ONE MORE SCROLL

"JUST FIVE MORE MINUTES"

A CHOICE-BASED STORY GAME ABOUT
DOOMSCROLLING

STIVEN

BACKGROUND

Many young people spend a large part of their free time scrolling through social media. It often starts with a simple thought "I guess, I'll scroll just for 5 minutes". But it often ends up from 5 mins → 30 mins → more than an hour.

the game explores how repeated small choices can affect an entire day and eventually become a habit that is difficult to break

Reasons why I want to make this game:

- Relatable to young people
- Common everyday behavior
- Allow players to reflect and experience the consequences themselves

GAME CONCEPT

One More Scroll is a branching story game about a young person trying to get through an ordinary day.

The player must decide how to spend their limited time.

Small choices → Consequences → Different outcomes

This game is not simply about telling players that scrolling is bad. Instead, players experience the results of their own choices.

PLAYER & STARTING POINT

Players role:

A young person starting a normal day.

Starting Point:

7:00 AM

The alarms rings.

You turn it off and pick up your phone.

"i'll just scroll for five minutes."

First Choice:

PUT THE PHONE DOWN

or

ONE MORE SCROLL

From this point, the story branches according to the player's decision

TYPES OF CHOICES

The game uses different types of choices:

- Cause/Effect Choices
"Scroll for another 30 mins" → Lose time
- Ethical Choices
"Keep scrolling or finish the work you promised to do?"
- Exploratory Choices
"Stay in your room or go outside?"
- Directional Choices
"Start your day" → Productive Route
"Keep scrolling" → Scrolling Route

Every choice comes with their own consequences

THE LOOP

Player can continue repeating the cycle or break it through their choices

THREE POSSIBLE OUTCOMES

Good – Break the Cycle

The players manage their time, breaks the scrolling habit, completes important tasks, and ends the day feeling satisfied

Average – A Day Half-Spent

The Player makes both productive and unproductive choices. The day isn't ruined, but some time is lost.

Bad – One More Day

The players repeatedly chooses to scroll. Most of the day disappears, leading to regret and the never ending cycles begin again.

GOAL & CONCLUSION

I want the players to experience the small decision that they make in their life matters a lot

Recognize → Experience → Reflect

Because the biggest changes start with one small decision

VISUAL STYLE & FONT

Background – Black (#121212)

Main Text – White (#F2F2F2)

Another color palletes

- Gray (#A7A7A7)
- Soft Blue (#6C8CFF)
- Green(#7FB685) , Red (#D97777), Yellow (#D8B65D) for the three endings

Fonts Choices:

Title – Space Grotesk Bold

Body – Inter Regular

THANK YOU